Restaurateur John Resnick and chef Andrew Bachelier pulled inspiration from around the world to plan their second Carlsbad project after their resounding success with wood-fired restaurant Campfire. Enter Jeune et Jolie, a modern French bistro that opened late last year. Diners can hit the waves and then enjoy the bright patio and art-peppered interior by Los Angeles-based design firm Bells + Whistles, who utilized plush banquettes, natural oak and pink marble. "Chefs in Paris are starting to embrace a lot of global flavors, and we wanted to do that," says Resnick of Bachelier's seafood- and produce-intensive menu featuring classic French dishes with a contemporary twist, such as Vietnamese-influenced frog legs. Leigh Lacap's beverage program incorporates ingredients from France (the extensive absinthe list is served either drip or frappe) while cocktails such as the Algérie with Calvados, absinthe, lemon and ras el hanout look to former French colonies for inspiration. 2659 State St., Carlsbad, 760-637-5266; jeune-jolie.com. FACE PLANTS

Sisters Roxane and Liana Pekelharing's new clean beauty line, Cleban, named for their grandfather's former apothecary shop in Amsterdam, continues the family's tradition of beauty through wellness. Liana, a trained herbalist, and Roxane formulate their Northern California-made products to high standards, free of GMOs, parabens, synthetic colors, flavors and fragrances. The newly launched Lumen set, designed to nourish and illuminate the skin, features a moisturizer and an extract brew crafted with rose, hibiscus, goji berry, tulsi and vanilla. "Our products are designed in sets that complement each other like sisters to restore balance and awaken beauty," Roxane says. "When done right, some things are just better together." cleban.com. KA
